Product Description

Replacement skin, Set 2 pc for 1005809 (W45092)

Good news — this page helps resolve a mystery from two products back. Same missing-brand gap here (no "Make:" field, MPN S401.100.813.M), but this MPN pattern directly matches an entry I saw in that garbled comparison table on the "Portable Hand Trainer" page: the "Injection Arm, Item No: 1005809, W45092, MPN S401100rm" — with its replacement skin listed as Item No. 1013384, which is exactly this product's Item No.

That's a strong match: same item number, same base-product cross-reference (1005809/W45092), and the same "S4xx" MPN family. This makes it very likely that this product — and probably the "One Year Injection Training Arm" (S406.M) and "Replacement Skin for Multipurpose Venous Training Arm"

(S402.813.M) from earlier — are all 3B Scientific products, one of your 14 authorized brands, rather than an unlisted manufacturer. Worth confirming with your 3B Scientific catalog/rep, but this is a real lead rather than a guess this time.

Replacement Skin, Set of 2 — For Injection Arm 1005809 (W45092)

The Replacement Skin, Set 2 pc (Item No. 1013384 [W99999-182], 0.58 kg, MPN: S401.100.813.M) is the designated replacement skin set for the Injection Arm (Item No. 1005809, W45092) — [CONFIRM: likely 3B Scientific, pending catalog match]. It restores the injection practice surface on an existing arm trainer without requiring a full unit replacement.

Why a 2-piece set matters for a busy skills lab: supplying two skin pieces per kit means an institution can rotate a fresh surface in without waiting for a single-piece reorder to arrive, keeping the trainer usable across back-to-back class sessions during peak wear periods.

Why this matters generally: the skin on any injection arm trainer absorbs repeated needle insertion across a term's worth of student practice. As it wears, puncture realism and injection feel degrade even though the arm's underlying mechanism remains functional. A replacement skin set extends the working life of the arm at a fraction of the cost of a new unit.
