Product Description

Three Artery Sections. Includes skin, two foam pads, lubricant, tubing with pulse bulb, one complete artery, two middle artery sections, and instruction manual. Light.

This one's missing a piece the others all had: no stated base-unit compatibility. Every other "replacement/for [product]" page in this batch names its base trainer explicitly (e.g., "for W44217," "for W46502"). This page just lists contents — skin, foam pads, lubricant, tubing with pulse bulb, arteries — with no mention of which simulator it belongs to. Given the pulse-bulb and artery-section contents, this is almost certainly for an arterial puncture/ABG (arterial blood gas) training arm, but I don't want to guess the specific base unit number. Worth pulling that from the brochure or Nasco catalog before publishing — a buyer needs to know which trainer this fits.

Also: the description ends with a lone word "Light" — likely meaning this is the light-skin-tone variant (paralleling the "Skin and Vein Replacement Kit, black" pattern from earlier), but it's tacked on with no context. Worth phrasing that explicitly rather than leaving it as a trailing fragment.

Skin with 3 Artery Sections — Arterial Puncture Replacement Kit, Light Skin Tone

The Skin with 3 Artery Sections (Item No. LF00998U, 0.51 kg) by Nasco Healthcare, USA is a replacement kit for [CONFIRM: which arterial puncture/ABG trainer this fits], in the light skin tone variant. It's built for institutions refreshing the arterial access practice surface on an existing trainer.

What's included: Skin, two foam pads, lubricant, tubing with pulse bulb, one complete artery section, two middle artery sections, and an instruction manual.

Why the pulse bulb matters: the tubing and pulse bulb let instructors simulate a palpable arterial pulse during practice — a key skill checkpoint for arterial puncture technique, since students need to locate the pulse by palpation before attempting needle insertion, just as they would on a real patient.
