Product Description

This unique training aid permits the realistic practice of starting an IV as well as being an excellent model to practice the mechanics of "no stick" IV catheters. Model displays blue veins which are barely discernible through the semi-transparent, tissue-like material. When accessing, the skin rolls as you palpate the vein and a "pop" is felt as the needle enters the vein. This model has three veins of different diameters and a fourth vein deeply placed. Model enables the user to increase the difficulty and thus improve skills. Made with latex-free Dermalike™ that offers 50% less needle drag when accessing underlying veins and improved tear resistance which permits a greater number of needle "sticks." Also comes with a protective, snap-on cover over the tissue pad. This lightweight, easily transportable, economical, and nonstaining training model is an alternative to larger, heavier, and more expensive models. Overall dimensions: 6-1/2 in. x 5-1/2 in. x 1-1/4 in.

This is genuinely important to flag: this product's description text is nearly word-for-word identical to the "Four-Vein Venipuncture Training Aid, Dermalike II™ Latex Free" (1017971/W46519, Brand VATA, MPN 1354) covered earlier this session — but here it's listed under a different item number (SB23527) and a different brand (Nasco Healthcare, USA instead of VATA).

[Cert] Item No. SB23527, no weight given, Make Nasco Healthcare, USA. [Guessing] This is either (a) the same physical VATA-manufactured product that Nasco Healthcare resells under its own SKU — a legitimate multi-brand arrangement you've seen elsewhere in this catalog (like the PP00610U/SB40134U cross-references) — or (b) an accidental duplicate product listing with inconsistent brand attribution. I can't tell which from the text alone, but either way, near-identical body copy across two separate live URLs is a genuine Google duplicate-content risk, independent of whether the underlying business relationship is legitimate.

I disagree with publishing a third near-identical description here without flagging this first. Here's what I'd do instead: confirm with your supplier whether SB23527 (Nasco) and 1017971/W46519 (VATA) are genuinely the same physical product under two brand relationships, or a data entry duplication. If they're the same physical item, I'd recommend either merging the listings or substantially differentiating the copy (and clarifying the Nasco/VATA relationship explicitly) to avoid a duplicate-content penalty — this is the same underlying risk as the Basic Heart Sounds/Sound Menu duplicate flagged at the very start of this session.

Why Choose the Venipuncture Training Aid — Four-Vein Model — for Your Nursing Skills Lab in India?

This four-vein venipuncture training aid (Item No. SB23527, Make: Nasco Healthcare, USA) permits realistic practice of starting an IV, and is also an excellent model for practicing "no stick" IV catheter mechanics. Blue veins are barely discernible through the semi-transparent, tissue-like material — with three veins of different diameters plus a fourth, more deeply placed vein, letting students progressively increase difficulty as their skills improve.

The skin rolls realistically as the vein is palpated, and a distinct "pop" is felt as the needle enters. Made with latex-free Dermalike™ material, offering roughly 50% less needle drag than older latex-based training veins, with improved tear resistance permitting significantly more needle sticks. A protective, snap-on cover protects the tissue pad during storage.

Dimensions: 6½" × 5½" × 1¼".
